

PERSIAN SUMMER DAY CAMP

فارسی شکر است

June 30th - July 25th, 2008

Offered by LARC at SDSU in collaboration with National University

Designed for students grades 7th-12th

STARTALK Persian Program @ SDSU

Through the generosity of the STARTALK program, administered by The National Foreign Language Center, we are able to offer a unique language experience for middle and high school students.

This non-residential language and culture program is open to interested and qualified students, grades 7-12. Applications are available at:

http://larcnet.sdsu.edu/downloads/Startalk2008_application.pdf

There are no fees for participation, although students' families must arrange for their transportation to SDSU.

The unique features of the program are the low teacher-to-student ratio and the opportunity to meet nearby Persian communities for cultural enrichment.

The program is designed to teach three levels of learners, and non-heritage and heritage speakers are encouraged to apply.

Classes start at 9 am and finish at noon. The four-week program begins June 30 and ends July 25, with the 4th of July holiday observed. Instruction takes place on the San Diego State University campus.

Regular field trips will expose students to the rich cultural mosaic of the Persian communities of San Diego. Classroom activities also include dancing, music, movies, cooking, and other culturally appropriate events. All field trips and activities are supervised and chaperoned. Written parental permissions will be required for minors.

Each classroom will have a head teacher and assistants who are experienced in teaching these age groups. Students will also have access to the state-of-the-art lab facilities.
